BUD POILE

The spirit and drive with which general manager Norman Robert (Bud) Poile leads his Vancouver Canucks can perhaps be best explained by recapping this scene one chilly December night last year at the Montreal Forum:

The Canadiens are pouring it on — 6-0 — midway through the third period and Poile is finding it difficult to sit still in the red seat four or five rows behind Vancouver's bench.

Frank Mahovlich scores. 7-0.

"You're yellow number five!" a rather portly French-Canadian fan seated in front of Poile yells at one of the Canuck players skating towards the bench. "Ya hear me? I said you're yellow!"

At which point a fuming Canucks' g.m. taps the fellow on the shoulder and suggests, in no uncertain terms, he cools it. "The kids are doing the best they can," Poile says. "Now get off their backs!"

The French-Canadian turns, offers a few choice profanities and the next thing you know a burly security guard is on the scene, separating the two.

"Sometimes I guess I get too involved," Poile explains later. "I'm proud of our organization and proud of our players. It's tough to sit there and watch them play their guts out against a team like Montreal.

"I know these things take time. But we'll have our day . . . I'm sure of it."

In 20 years as a professional player, coach and general manager, Poile has experienced a good share of success.

He made the grand tour in seven seasons as a centre and right-winger in the NHL with five of the six clubs at the time — Toronto, Chicago, Detroit, New York and Boston. The Maple Leafs turned

Poile turned to coaching as a player-coach with Tulsa in the now-defunct United States Hockey League in 1950-51. The following season he was with Glace Bay of the Maritime Major Hockey League and it was there, he says, where he learned all of his hockey.

"I was the trainer, ticket manager, coach and general manager, and somehow managed to finish in first place," he says. "It was quite an experience."

In 1952-53 he joined the Detroit-sponsored Edmonton Flyers of the Western League as coach and stayed there for 10 seasons. His duties there eventually led to manager-coach and head of Detroit's western Canada farm system. Edmonton won three championships under his guidance.

From 1962 thru 1966 Poile was general manager with the WHL's San Francisco entry and during that span swept two championships. Then it was on to the National League and the new Philadelphia Flyers.

Following the NHL's original expansion draft, the Flyers — under Poile — finished first in the Western Division in their initial season.

Entering his third season at the helm of the Canucks, Bud and his wife, Margaret, live in West Vancouver with their daughter, Margo. Their son, David, works in the front offices of the new NHL Atlanta Flames.

Right: Poile, with the Gordon Howe clan.

VIC STASIUK

It didn't take long for 42-year-old Vic Stasiuk to settle in comfortably as coach of the 1972-73 National Hockey League Vancouver Canucks.

Right from day one at training camp in Calgary Stasiuk placed his cards on the table . . . defying any of the 55 athletes in camp to challenge his approach to the game.

"If you're concerned you show up early," he told the players in his initial address. "Guys who are late are losers. If you show up late, you'd better have an explanation."

Stasiuk was signed to a one-year contract by general manager Bud Poile back in May. He replaced Hal Laycoe, who moved up to the position of vice-president in charge of player development.

Poile's relationship with Stasiuk goes back to the 1952-53 season when he played under Poile with the Western League Edmonton Flyers. In 1966-67, he was named to coach the Eastern League Jersey Devils, a Philadelphia farm club, and from there he graduated to the Quebec Aces (1967-68 and 1968-69) where he was named the American Hockey League's "Coach of the Year" in his second season.

The following winter — 1969-70 — he launched what developed into a two-year term as coach of the Philadelphia Flyers, finished fifth and third before his dismissal.

Stasiuk was born May 23, 1929 in Lethbridge, Alberta. He stands 6' 1" and weighs 190 pounds . . . not much more than he weighed during a playing career that saw him finish with 183 NHL career goals.

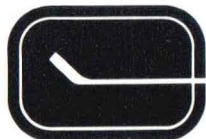

Vic left high school to pursue a hockey career that unfolded with the Junior "A" Edmonton Wetaskiwin Canadiens, a team sponsored by the Chicago Black Hawks in 1947-48.

He turned professional in the Chicago chain with the Kansas City entry in the Old United States Hockey League in 1948-49. Late in the season, the parent Hawks called him up to the NHL.

The following year Chicago traded him to the Detroit Red Wings, a power in the era spanning from 1948 to 1954 when they won seven consecutive league titles. He played parts of three seasons with Poile's Edmonton club before Detroit dealt him to Boston in 1955-56, where he enjoyed his most productive scoring years.

Stasiuk, John Bucyk and Bronco Horvath formed Boston's renowned "Uke Line", one of the highest scoring trios from 1957-58 through 1960-61. In the middle of the 1960-61 campaign, he was traded back to Detroit where he finished his NHL playing career in 1962-63.

He played on three Stanley Cup Winning teams and appeared in a total of 69 playoff games.

DUNC WILSON

1 Height: 5'11" — Weight 175 lbs.
Born: Toronto, Ontario, March 22, 1948
Position: GOALTENDER

Dunc Wilson has been told in no uncertain terms that the 1972-73 goaltending job with the Vancouver Canucks is his until he proves he can't handle it.

And Wilson is ready to accept the challenge.

Entering his third season with the Canucks, Wilson reported to camp at a trim 172 pounds, frothing at the bit, as they say.

The 24-year-old Toronto native appeared in 53 games last season and scrambled off with 16 victories to his credit. He was charged with 30 losses and played in three tied games.

Not necessarily a vintage year . . . but not all that bad, either, when you consider the Canucks' won-lost record over the season was 20-50-8.

"I know I can play better hockey," Wilson candidly admits. "The people in Vancouver—and I'm including management when I say this—have been patient with me right from the start. Now I'm ready to pay them back."

New coach Vic Stasiuk, for one, is looking forward to having Wilson under his wing once again.

"I coached Dunc in Quebec City a couple of years ago," Stasiuk says. "I don't think there's a better one-on-one goaltender in the league. He loves a challenge."

ED DYCK

Height: 5'11" — Weight 165 lbs.
Born: Warman, Sask., Oct. 29, 1950
Position: GOALTENDER

The toughest accountant in the world would no doubt grant permission if young Ed Dyck submitted an expense account claiming "wear and tear" on his luggage at the close of last season.

This soft-spoken, talented goaltender from Warman, Sask., was the Canucks' most travelled athlete in 1971-72 . . . a situation general manager Bud Poile frankly admits was a mistake within the organization.

"It was too much to ask of a kid in his first full year of pro hockey," Poile says. "Ed never had a chance to settle down in one place and really show us what he could do."

Dyck made the grand tour: Seattle, Rochester, Vancouver, back to Rochester, to Seattle again and eventually, Vancouver once more.

Reputed to have one of the quickest catching hands in the game, at the age of 22 (as of Oct. 29) Dyck certainly has the stamp of approval from the Canucks' brass.

JOCELYN GUEVREMONT

2

Height: 6'2" — Weight 190 lbs.
Born: Montreal, Quebec, March 1, 1951
Position: DEFENCE

Let Team Canada assistant coach John Ferguson tell it: "Jocelyn Guevremont is one of the most exciting young defence-men to come along in years. He's got everything going for him . . . size, a good head and that great shot."

Ferguson's reaction erupted after the former Montreal Canadiens tough guy watched Guevremont during the first week of workouts at Maple Leaf Gardens this summer at Team Canada headquarters.

In his rookie NHL season, big Josh collected 51 scoring points in 75 games, just five points shy of the pace set by Dale Tallon in his freshman year.

"I think the most impressive thing about Guevremont is his willingness to learn," says Hal Laycoe, a defenceman of some renown during his own NHL career.

"Another thing," Laycoe adds, "is the fact he plays just as well on the road as he does at home."

Guevremont found time during his hectic rookie season to marry a Montreal girl . . . and now at the age of 21, he's prepared to settle down in Vancouver for a long, long time.

BARRY WILKINS

4

Height: 6 ft. — Weight 190 lbs.
Born: Toronto, Ontario, Feb. 28, 1947
Position: DEFENCE

Mention the words injury prone to Barry Wilkins and you're liable to get popped in the nose.

Gall stones, separated shoulder, broken jaw, damaged teeth and gums . . . add them up and it totals 33 games on the sidelines during the 1971-72 season.

"As far as I'm concerned," the rugged defenceman says, "last year was a complete write-off."

Wilkins spent the summer working at various hockey schools and reported to training camp in top physical form.

"A good sign," coach Vic Stasiuk noted, "because Wilkie is going to be a key man for us back there."

Wilkins is part of the youth movement Vancouver has come up with back on the blueline. Because he played in his first NHL game with the Boston Bruins six years ago, several people lose sight of the fact he's still just 25 years old.

"There were times last year though," he quips, "that I felt more like 45!"

DENNIS KEARNS

6

Height: 5'8" — Weight 182 lbs.
Born: Kingston, Ontario, Sept. 27, 1945
Position: DEFENCE

In his own quiet way, defenceman Dennis Kearns went about the task of completing a highly successful rookie season in the NHL last year.

While Kearns turned professional back in 1967-68, he never got a crack at the National League until Vancouver drafted him from the Chicago Black Hawks in June of 1971. His credentials were three impressive winters with the Portland Buckaroos of the Western League and another with the Central League Dallas Black Hawks.

"Dennis is more of a 'heads-up' defenceman than a hitter," Canucks' general manager Bud Poile points out. "There isn't a guy on our club who can lug the puck out of our end better than Kearns."

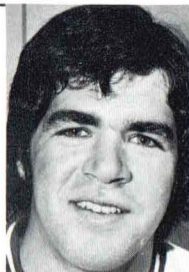

His partner back on the blueline for the most part last season was Jocelyn Guevremont and together, the promising rookies worked on complementing each other's moves.

9

Height: 6'1" — Weight 195 lbs.
Born: Noranda, Quebec, Oct. 19, 1950
Position: DEFENCE

When the Canuck roster was drawn up by general manager Bud Poile this fall, the name Dale Tallon was listed under "right defencemen".

And you could almost hear the sigh of relief from as far away as Tallon's lavish, penthouse apartment in Vancouver's sprawling West End.

He was used frequently as a rightwinger last season — a position he doesn't necessarily appreciate playing — and in his own words: "I'm ready to make up for any ground I lost."

On the afternoon of Sunday, March 19 last year Tallon was leading a rush from his rightwing post in the third period against the St. Louis Blues.

He managed to get his shot away but a split second later went sailing through the air following a check from rugged Bob Plager. The next day Tallon underwent surgery for removal of a cartilage in his left knee. The ligaments also had to be repaired.

It finished him for the balance of the season and also had an affect on his golf game over the summer months. A former Canadian junior golf champion, Tallon joined the CPGA tour this past year.

When he was summoned to attend Team Canada's training camp in Toronto, the knee was pronounced fit by club doctors.

GREGG BODDY

Height: 6'2" — Weight 200 lbs.
Born: Ponoka, Alberta, March 19, 1949
Position: DEFENCE

It's a bronzed skate with two large hawk's wings attached to it with the inscription: "Fastest Skater Competition".

Boddy lined up against a half-dozen teammates last year and skated through a Royal Canadian Mounted Police radar trap to determine which Canuck player was, indeed, the fastest skater on the club. He won it with ease.

Boddy worked his way into the Canucks' lineup last season after serving a brief apprenticeship down on the farm with the Rochester Americans of the AHL.

He was originally drafted from the Edmonton Oil Kings by the Los Angeles Kings, then traded to the Montreal organization along with Leon Rochefort and Wayne Thomas in exchange for Larry Mickey, goaltender Jack Norris and Lucien Grenier.

The Canucks acquired him in May of 1971 from the Canadiens, giving up cash and the rights to Vancouver's third selection in the '71 amateur draft.

JIM HARGREAVES

5

Height: 5'11" — Weight 185 lbs.

Born: Winnipeg, Manitoba, Nov. 14, 1950

Position: DEFENCE

One thing Jim Hargreaves does not lack is confidence. And the hard-nosed defenceman is confident the 1972-73 hockey season will be his most productive yet.

Hargreaves was Vancouver's second amateur draft choice two years ago when the consensus among the Canucks' scouting fraternity was that his moves resembled those of Boston's Ted Green.

An ankle injury was unveiled during training camp and the youngster missed a large portion of the 1970-71 season following surgery. Last year he played in 61 games with Rochester chalking up a whopping 127 minutes in penalties.

With regulars John Schella and Pat Quinn lost in the off-season drafts, Hargreaves is now rated as a prime candidate to land one of the blueline vacancies on a permanent basis.

ANDRE BOUDRIAS

7

Height: 5'8" — Weight 165 lbs.

Born: Montreal, Quebec, Sept. 19, 1943

Position: CENTRE

For Andre Boudrias to become any more popular with hockey fans in Western Canada, he'd have to stand on the corner of Granville and Georgia in downtown Vancouver and hand out complimentary tickets to the next Canucks-Boston game.

Boud's off-season travel is almost as hectic as the regular NHL schedule. He works as a public relations consultant for a brewery during the summer and without a doubt, he's the number one athlete in demand throughout B.C.

Boudrias and Orland Kurtenbach shared the Cyrus H. McLean trophy this past year as Vancouver's top scorers, each tied with 61 points.

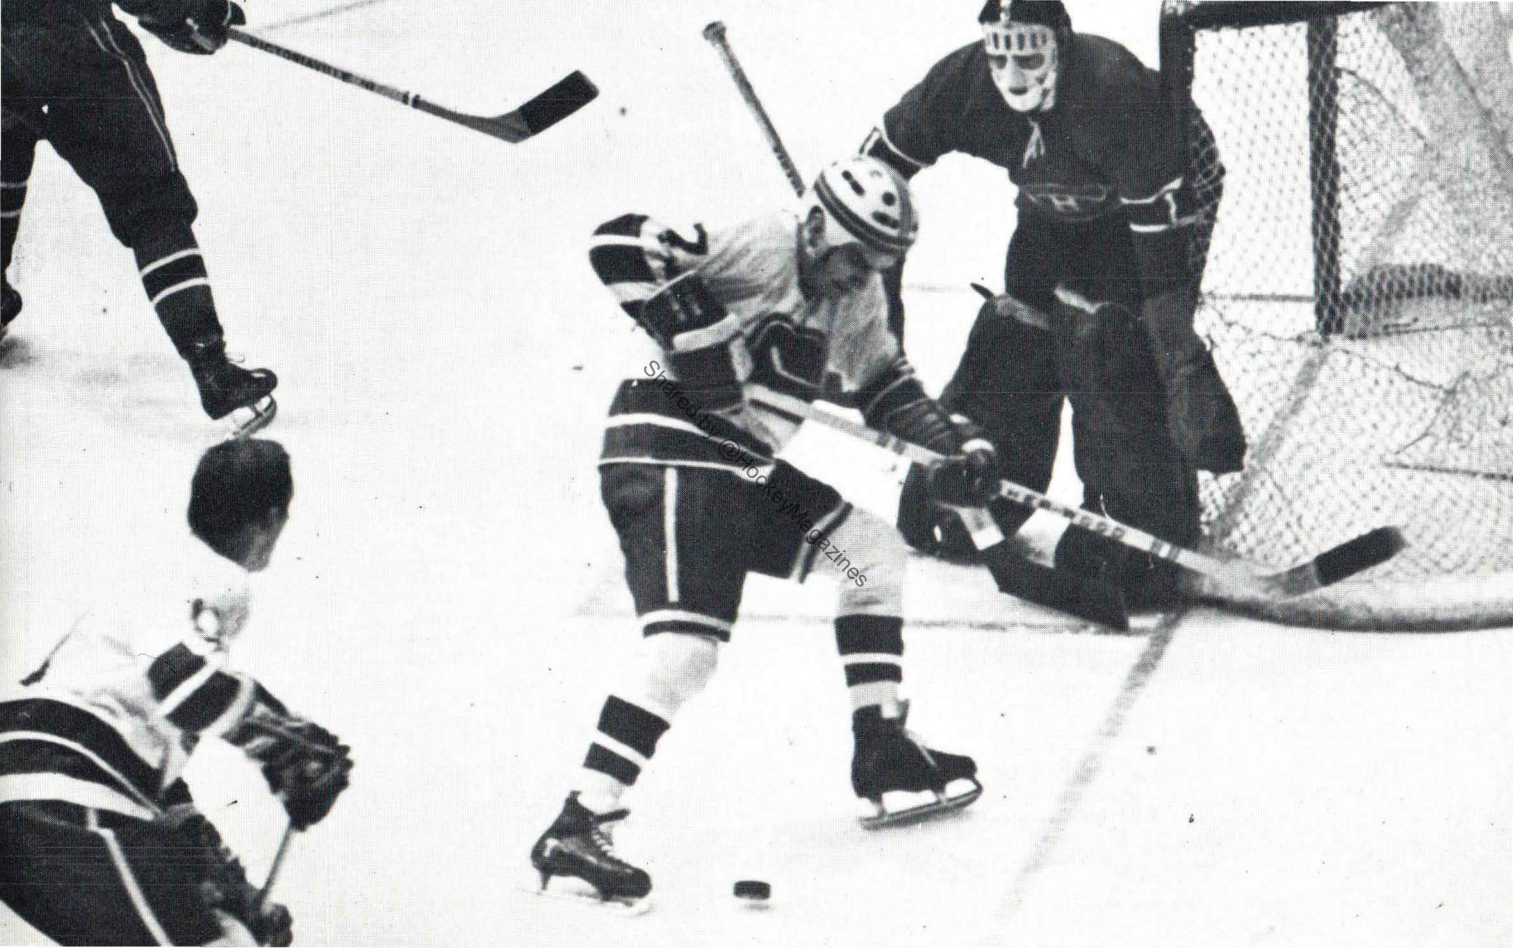

In two seasons with the Canucks the slick little centre has tallied 52 goals (25 in 1970-71; 27 last year). Not a bad average when you consider in 50 games with the St. Louis Blues prior to being sold to Vancouver he managed just three goals.

More surprisingly is the fact that Boudrias—who weighs no more than 165 pounds soaking wet—has missed just one game over two years of action.

Desire? Figure it out for yourself.

BOBBY SCHMAUTZ

8

Height: 5'9" — Weight 155 lbs.

Born: Saskatoon, Sask.

Position: RIGHT WING

The story of Bobby Schmautz can pretty well be wrapped up in 15 games during the 1971-72 season. Ironically, they were the 15 games he played in the minors with the Rochester Americans.

Things hadn't been going well for the zesty rightwinger in Vancouver and he reluctantly reported to Rochester determined to fight his way back to the National League.

In seven games with the Amerks, he merely scored seven goals and picked up eight assists in the process!

Schmautz was quickly summoned back to Vancouver and just as quickly won himself a permanent position with the big club.

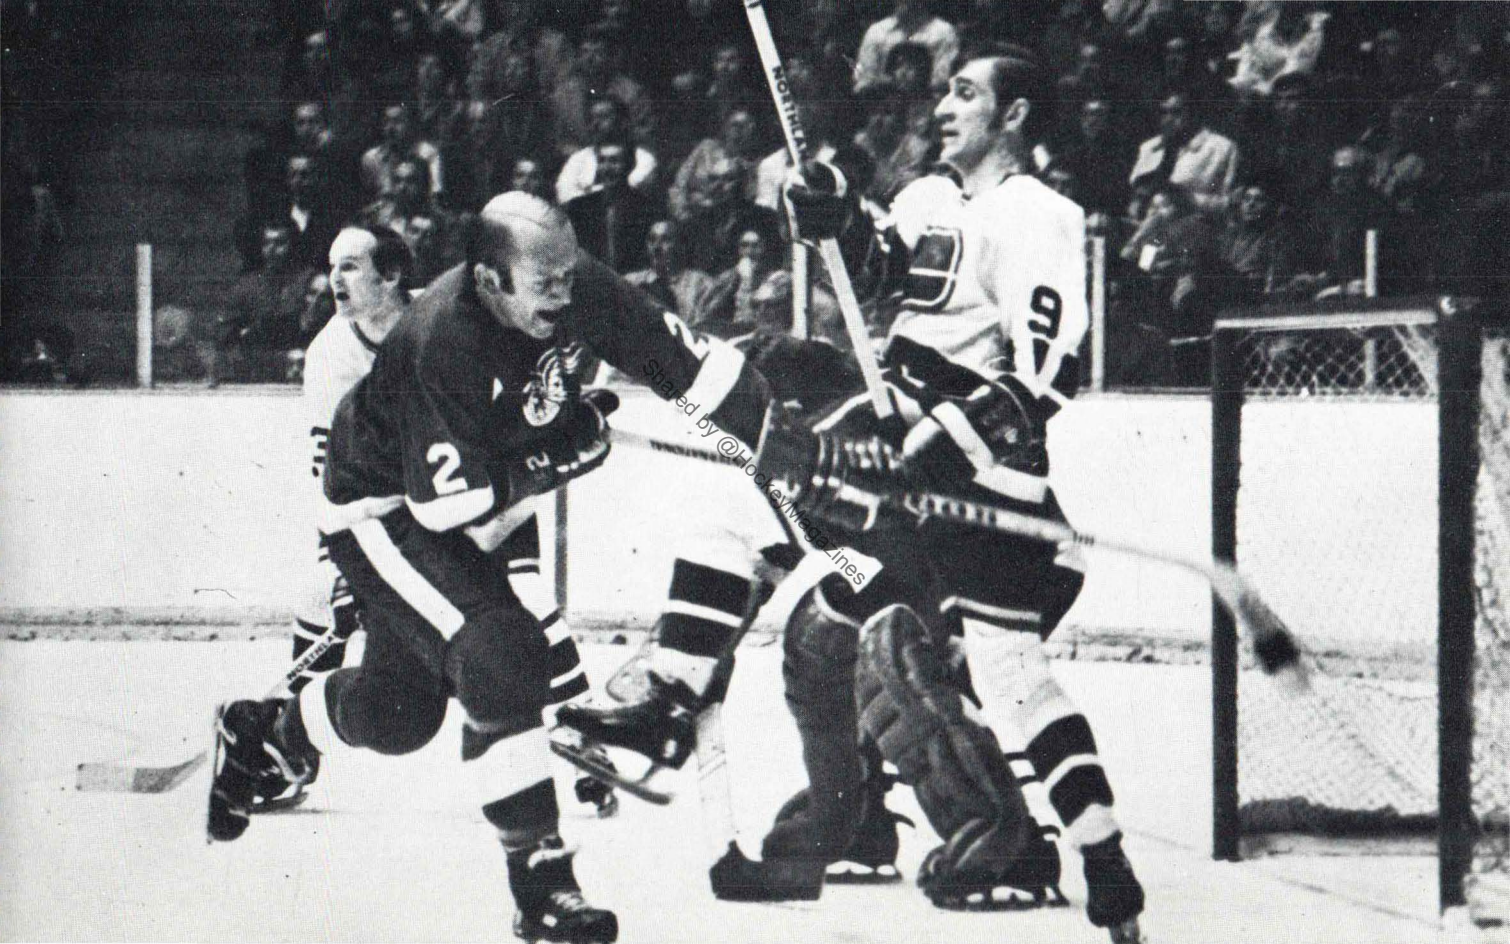

And that's not all he won. Schmautz decided one way to stick in the NHL was to refuse unnecessary body contact from the opposition and soon he mushroomed into the Canucks' tough guy.

He won two smashing victories right in Chicago Stadium one night, the first against Lou Angotti, then the redhead, Keith Magnuson. Along the trail, other Schmautz victims included Pittsburgh's Steve Cardwell, Arne Brown of Detroit and Boston's Don Awrey.

It cost him eight majors for fighting and a bundle of dough, but as Schmautz is the first to tell you: "It sure beats Rochester!"

DON LEVER

Height: 5'11" — Weight 175 lbs.
Born: South Porcupine, Ontario, Nov. 14, 1952
Position: CENTRE

The Canucks' new approach in 1972-73 can be summarized in two words: Don Lever.

"Originally," general manager Bud Poile explains, "our theory was to build our club around a couple of good, solid young defencemen. So in our first year we drafted Dale Tallon and then Jocelyn Guevremont.

"Now it's time we started building 'down the middle' and in Don Lever, I like to think we have one of the finest prospects at centre ice in the game."

Lever, a native of South Porcupine, Ont., is coming off an electrifying 61-goal season in the OHA with the junior Niagara Falls Flyers. He added 65 assists to that total for a whopping 126 points.

"You'll find that all a youngster like Don needs is plenty of ice time," Canucks' captain Orland Kurtenbach says. "He's one of these kids who just can't miss. It's going to take a little time, of course, but at his age there isn't any problem."

WAYNE MAKI

Height: 5'11" — Weight 190 lbs.
Born: Sault Ste. Marie, Ontario, Nov. 10, 1944

"When Wayne Maki makes a mistake out there on the ice," says Hal Laycoe, "it's usually an obvious one. As a result, the fans are quick to criticize.

"But I think it's also safe to say that Wayne Maki has scored some of the prettiest goals we've seen in Vancouver."

The easy-going leftwinger had a career total of seven NHL goals when he was drafted by the Canucks.

In his first full season with Vancouver he popped home 25 and for an encore he scored 22 last year.

"I think the key to success in the NHL is to keep in top shape 12 months of the year," he says. "That's another reason I like living in Vancouver so much.

"There are plenty of facilities available to a guy in pro sports—summer hockey schools, lots of parks for jogging, swimming . . . you name it."

19

Height: 5'7" — Weight 165 lbs.
Born: Temiscanigue, Quebec, April 19, 1951
Position: CENTRE

"He's just too smart for the rest of our guys," Amerks g.m. Doug Adam reported to Bud Poile in Vancouver. "The kid has too much hockey sense for the minors. His linemates have a heckuva time keeping up with him, both mentally and physically."

It wasn't long after Lemieux was handed a one-way plane ticket for Vancouver, where he finished with 42 NHL games under his belt.

Lemieux is only 5'7" and weighs 165 at his heaviest, yet the furious pace of the National League doesn't seem to bother him.

"I like the action, the body contact," he says. "In the NHL you have to think and react a lot quicker than in the minors. It keeps you sharp."

Lemieux was Vancouver's third selection in the 1971 amateur draft, behind his buddies and junior teammates Josh Guevremont and Bobby Lalonde.

One of the major problems facing the Vancouver Canucks as they swing into Year Three threatens to be a shortage of good, tough rightwingers.

He was Vancouver's second pick in the amateur draft last June and it didn't take g.m. Bud Poile long to hammer out a cozy two-year agreement with McSheffrey's legal aide, Gary Schrieder of Ottawa.

Check the youngster's credentials: not only does he stand two inches over six feet and weighs a trim 205 pounds, but with the Ottawa juniors last season he proved he knows where the net is by scoring 51 goals.

"We think he can jump right into the NHL," Poile predicts. "If this happens, he'll be a big plus for us on that right side."

To say the Vancouver Canucks had an inside track on the progress of young Gerry O'Flaherty's career would be an understatement.

Gerry's father, John, is the Canucks' chief scout, but it was Eastern scout Jack MacDonald who convinced everyone in the organization the younger O'Flaherty should become a member of the Canucks' family.

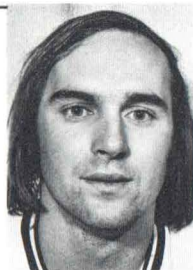

Gerry, a leftwinger, was drafted by the Toronto Maple Leafs two years ago from Kitchener of the OHA. He spent the past two seasons with Tulsa of the Central League and last year had a two-game shot with the parent Leafs.

He played on a line with Ron Ellis and Norm Ullman, replacing the injured Paul Henderson. In those two games, the Leafs beat Detroit 5-2 and lost to Boston 2-1 in Boston.

O'Flaherty has the reputation of being a solid, aggressive player ... a youngster who doesn't know how to produce any less than 100 per cent.

Don Tannahill's professional career was launched in a rather rocky fashion when he suffered a cracked knee-cap during the 1969-70 season with Oklahoma City of the Boston organization.

Since then, he hasn't left any doubt about the success of the two resulting knee operations.

Last year the stocky leftwinger was a key to the Boston Braves' AHL success with 30 goals and 44 assists.

When his name became available in the pro draft last June, the Canucks were quick to nab him.

Tannahill came up through the Boston chain via Niagara Falls of the OHA, where his final season he fired home 48 goals in just 54 games. He was the Bruins' top amateur pick back in 1969.

DAVE BALON

Height: 5'10" — Weight 172 lbs.
Born: Wakaw, Sask., Aug. 2, 1937

Vancouver hockey fans caught their first glimpse of Dave Balon as far back as the 1957-58 season when he was a highly-touted prospect in the New York Rangers' chain. He played in four games with the WHL games with the Canucks but has travelled a long, winding road since then—putting together 719 games of NHL mileage heading into this season.

Balon, Wayne Connelly and veteran Ron Stewart all came to Vancouver via an early-season trade that saw Gary Doak and Jim Wiste leave the Canuck organization for New York.

"We needed his goal-scoring savvy on that left side," Bud Poile explained at the time.

And Balon illustrated what the general manager was talking about by picking up 19 goals and the same number of assists in 59 games with Vancouver.

"I've found the goals will come if you keep at it," he says. "Let up, and you're dead."

Meet British Columbia's highest paid athlete . . . ever.

When Kurt signed a new three-year agreement with the Canucks back on Aug. 1 it was, in general manager Bud Poile's own words: "the largest contract in terms of money any professional athlete in B.C. has ever received."

Poile continued: "I've done quite a bit of research on the subject and I'm certain there isn't an athlete in the province who has ever been offered this kind of money."

It was a fitting tribute to the 36-year-old Kurtenbach, leader of men both on and off the ice.

He spends the off-season living in Burnaby, B.C. with his wife and four children, keeping on the move with summer hockey schools in both Lake Cowichan and North Vancouver.

At the conclusion of last season Kurt was honored in Toronto with the Charlie Conacher Memorial Trophy for his work with handicapped children. He coached a team of young fellows from Woodlands School to the Clarence Campbell Trophy in the 1971 International NHL Floor Hockey Tournament at Maple Leaf Gardens.

To quote one Hal Laycoe: "Kurt is strictly a first-class individual . . . a credit to the game."

JOHN WRIGHT

The scouting staff of the Vancouver Canucks breathed a long sigh of relief the day John Wright arrived in Calgary to take part in their 1972-73 training camp.

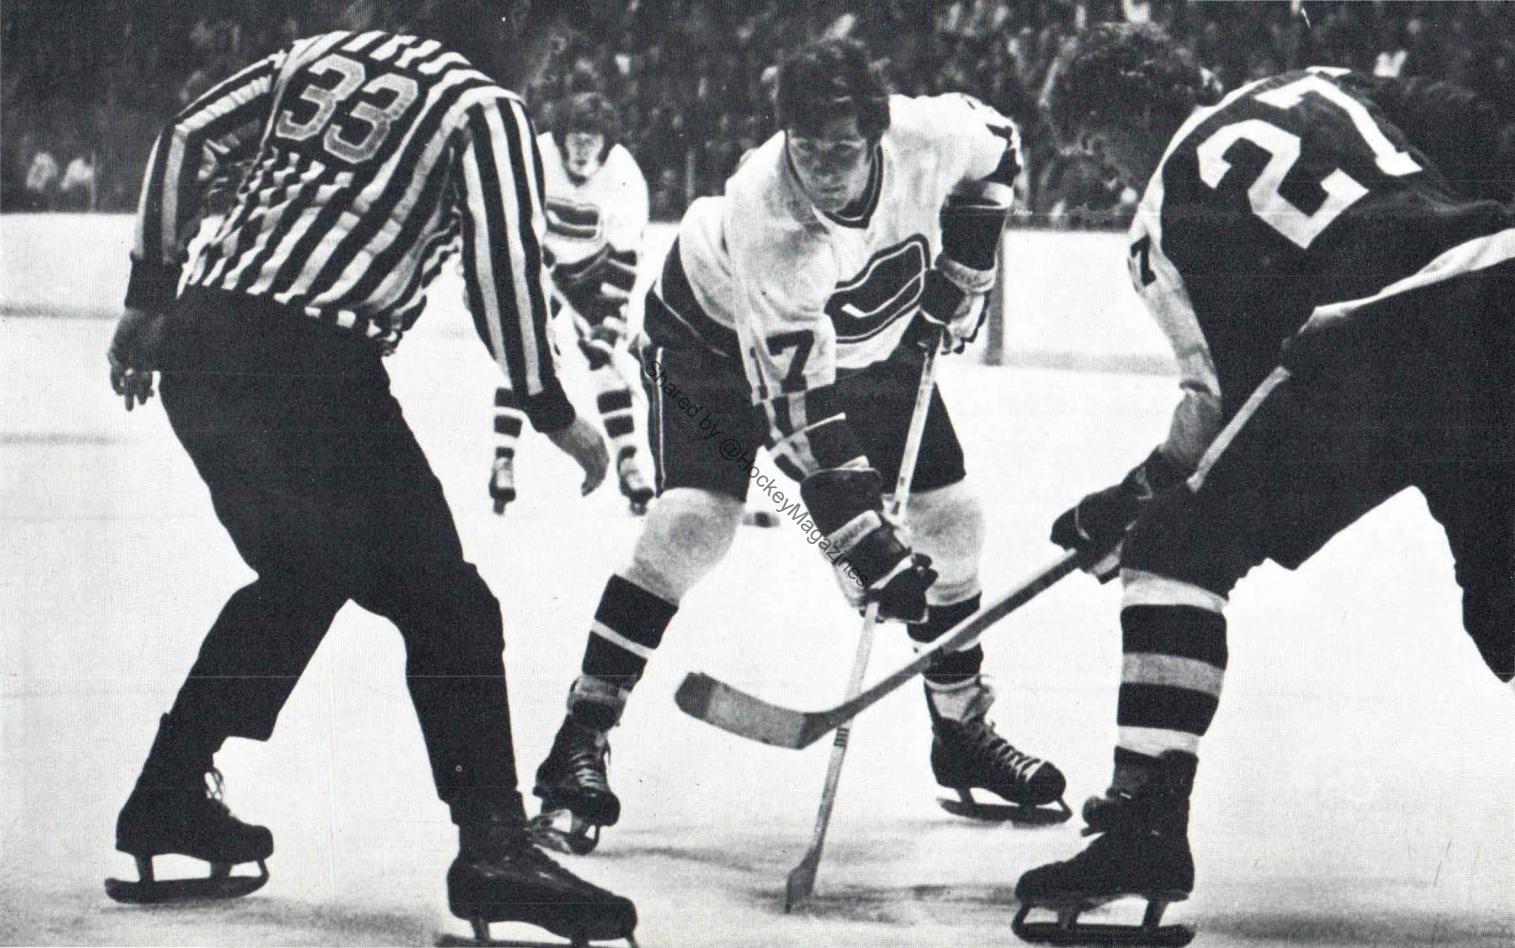

Wright had been regarded as something of a phantom since the Canucks drafted him two seasons ago. Because of his studies at the University of Toronto, he failed to show in either of the previous two camps.

Wright, a well-mannered 23-year-old, graduated with a Health and Physical Education degree and managed to enjoy a simply outstanding college hockey career in the process.

He was with the University of Toronto club that won four consecutive Canadian championships and also was a member of the Toronto Marlies in 1966-67, winners of the Memorial Cup.

Wright says his biggest thrill was the night he scored three goals and picked up two assists in an exhibition game against the Russians right in Toronto. It was a Soviet collegiate all-star squad . . . and many of those youngsters graduated to the team that played against Team Canada this year.

Wright, a bachelor, is a scratch golfer.

Coach Vic Stasiuk took one look at centre Bobby Lalonde during training camp in Calgary and immediately tagged him as "another Valary Kharlamov" — the Soviet Union's little super star, number 17.

"Lalonde is as good a prospect as I have ever seen," Stasiuk pointed out after watching him scoot through workouts. "He has a lot of ability, although there are a few things he'll have to learn.

"I'd like to see him show a more aggressive attitude occasionally to show people he really wants to play up here. The kid already shoots better than Ted Lindsay. If he could pick up a few of Lindsay's other traits, he could wind up being some hockey player."

He spent his time between Vancouver and Rochester . . . seeing enough of the minors to convince himself he belongs in the NHL.

Now if he can just convince Stasiuk . . .

BUICK CENTURY LUXUS COUPE

Orland Kurtenbach

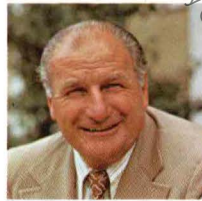

"I didn't want a big car but at the same time I wanted the interior roominess of a big car . . . and with the Buick Century I found it."

PONTIAC PARISIENNE BROUGHAM

Vic Stasiuk

"I love the smooth, comfortable ride of the Parisienne, the luxury interior and I'm completely sold on the new heavy duty bumpers."

PONTIAC LEMANS SPORT

Hal Laycoe

"I really went for that neat, trim, sharp styling of the LeMans . . . and it handles the way it looks — fantastic."

Three Choice Selections

Choosing your new car for '73 is a big decision but there's no decision to be made about where to buy it — Carter GM.

At Carter's you receive the very best in sales and service because we're particular about the way we treat our customers.
